

Chapter XVIII: Final Fate

The ship sat in a cavern with only dripping magma as a light source, Nibiru was full of many tricks, and had contemplated the ability to fuse with his planet. The only exit was somewhere within a labyrinth of tunnels.

Sam: Monster. This creature... doesn't belong here.

Steve: There's nobody around. Nibiru must be up on the surface. Sam? What is it?

Sam: If only Notch had found Herobrine sooner. This... encapsulation of abstract... nothingness is just a dream, there's something ultra-sinister waiting for you in the real world. I think that... you've been caught up in some sort of... unforeseeable fate. I mean I can just feel the fire of raging war. ...I just wish I was more than a figure of your imagination.

Alex: You ARE more than a figure of our imagination. You're the factor that allows us to defeat Herobrine. You're the missing piece of puzzle, the secret answer, the-

Sam: Okay. I think... we ditch the whole Theory of Everything.

Steve: Yeah?

Sam: Yeah. Yeah! We ARE the factor that puts this evil in requiem! We don't need some dumb realization, we are the complete puzzle! I say we give Nibiru the Impossible Element! Right? We can wake up with enough chaos before he does damage to anything! Once he realizes we've solved the equation he's going to fulfil the bargain!

Alex: Excellent! We just need to get out of here!

...

Herobrine: Alright Alex and Steve, your time should be up in only 10 or so minutes.

White entity: 10 minutes? I thought it was a nanosecond.

Herobrine: It's a nanosecond of the dream itself, but regaining consciousness takes a little longer.

The INFECTER: Should we go and prepare to greet them?

Herobrine: No, you guys have done enough. Head back to base. However, I'm sure they'd love to see their uncle. After all, it is a very nice day.

...

Guardian Sun: Nibiru, your despicable actions will not get you any closer to the Impossible Element. Just turn away before we have to take you down... again.

Nibiru: You don't have a very good act for insinuating "threat". I-

Guardian Moon: Well I know I do. So wipe that stupid grin away, point the laser away, and get the hell out of this galaxy once and for all!

Nibiru: A bit better, but I'm not leaving without that element. It could be a very simple trade you know...

Sam: Well then let's make it simple!

The 3 had managed to find the tunnel out, and they had the Impossible Element ready to bestow upon Nibiru.

Guardian Sun: Guys, what are you doing.

Alex: Nibiru, we're making the trade!

Nibiru: What?

Guardian Sun & Moon: WHAT?!?

Sam: As long as you fulfill your end of the deal, and rustle up enough chaos, you can have it.

Nibiru: Really?

Guardian Sun: I object! You can't!

Guardian Moon: I object as well! Don't you realize what power you'd be giving him!?

Steve: We'd be giving him exactly what he deserves.

...

Guardian Sun: Have you completely lost your minds!?

Nibiru: I think they're learning to make difficult decisions, and this one will send them home.

Guardian Moon: You're really going to give it to him?

Alex: Yeah.

Nibiru: Alright guys, thank you.

Sam: Indeed. Though, one thing first.

Nibiru: What?

Sam: This thing follows no laws of physics, so don't lose sight of it, because it processes no energy, you can't hear it doing things, and it's invisible with no definite volume.

Nibiru: Oh I know, I've got a safe place for it.

Sam: Yeah, you definitely wouldn't want to lose track of it!

Sam threw the Impossible element over Nibiru's head, where it landed in between some jagged rocks, it made no sound, it didn't bounce, it didn't even disturb the dust.

Nibiru: Y- Y- YOU IDIOTS!! IT'LL TAKE ME DAYS TO FIND IT!!!

Alex: Well you've got 7 good ones, try and find it before then!

Nibiru's lust for the element grew strong knowing it was lost. He rushed over to where he thought was the crash site, but he was very far off.

Steve: Like we were gonna give it to him.

Guardian Sun: You lost it for him. He'll be checking the same square foot for a half hour!

Sam: Yeah, we also decided that the Theory of Everything wasn't worth our time, I mean we can't-

Guardian Moon: Woah woah woah, you gave up?

Sam: Well, we can't expect something that's completely unforeseeable to happen in front of our eyes.

Guardian Moon: Well then what are you going to do until the planets align?

Alex: We're gonna muster up chaos right now, that's a pretty far drop you see.

Guardian Sun: Guys, suicide is not the answer, you need supreme chaos. Like a planet or a star exploding, or a black hole sucking one away.

Steve: We can't wait any longer, Herobrine is off terrorizing the world and won't stop there.

Guardian Sun: Listen, you will die to your uncle and his followers if you don't foresee what you're up against.

Sam: Okay, how many intelligent life-forms have actually achieved "the Theory of Everything"? Because, point us to them and then maybe we'll get a small clue.

Guardian Moon: ...No one we know.

Sam: See, it's drawback after drawback after drawback!

Guardian Sun: Guys nonetheless you have at least 7 days until there will be an event with enough chaos to wake you.

Alex: ...No we don't. We need to get the Impossible Element back!

A new plan was emerging from the ashes, Alex and Steve could wake in only moments if they could find the Impossible Element before Nibiru. What would they do once they have it? Something big. But first... a new place.

Keeper of the Rainbow: I've never failed you, have I?

God of Existence: Never. But it'll take more than just three of us.

Light Steve: You're right. Who else is in?

Boss Steve: Aye, count me in, they'll be awake soon, whether they've achieved the Theory of Everything or not, there's a war waiting for them. And it won't be pretty.

God of Existence: Well then, that leaves...

...Notch himself

Notch: Herobrine has more than we could imagine, kept under control of the MOAE, we've only got one shot. We're blind of his intention, and we haven't seen the light of day in over 20 years. He's kept us in this fearful state. ...I was in the moment he set hand on that crystal.

God of Existence: Alright, and lastly, Herobrine had a man on the inside of the dream, do we know his intention?

Keeper of the Rainbow: Yes, he was utilizing this "4th dimension" to find clues.

Light Steve: Clues for what, exactly?

Keeper of the Rainbow: STIDRELM.

...

Steve: Are there like some special glasses?

Guardian Sun: No, just look intently.

Sam: Guys.

They looked up at Sam, who was knocking on the air above his palm... wait, that's not air.

Alex: You got it.

Sam: Yep.

Guardian Moon: Looks like Nibiru hasn't noticed.

Nibiru: Intense breathing

Guardian Sun: Alright, go go go, we have to rig it before he notices we left.

Steve: ...I'm guessing we have a lot of time.

...

Herobrine: Rise my glorious victims. Rise.

...

Alex: It was an honor.

Guardian Sun: Please. You've given us one less thing to deal with. Thank you.

Steve: I guess this is goodbye.

Guardian Moon: Oh, don't get sentimental now.

Steve: I'm not, I'm patriotic.

...

Sam: Alright, Element is rigged, just press the button.

Guardian Moon: Oh, you might want to set up a remote control. The ship won't take damage from it's own shield. The antimatter atoms are so uniform that the rapid expansion only allows it to explode away from the ship.

Guardian Sun: He's right, plus, the most chaos will exist upon the surface of the planet.

Alex: Well, I hope we cross paths again. Obviously, in better circumstances.

Guardian Sun: Likewise. Thank you for all you've done. We'll make sure Nibiru doesn't counter this plan.

Alex: Yeah, we're gonna head up too.

The Guardian brothers went back up the tunnel, Nibiru was standing before them- enraged.

Nibiru: I sense nothing. You took it.

Guardian Moon: You will never lay your hands on that element Nibiru. Your reign is concluded.

Nibiru: I will destroy everything in my path to get that thing, I need it! I will learn what happens at the very end!

Steve: Nibiru, there's never an end. The idea isn't to reverse your mistakes or make up for them but to learn from them. But clearly you're just a stubborn creature that doesn't learn from anything.

Nibiru: Your boy's not here. I can feel him beneath me. I'll kill him. Hand over the Element!

Alex: Sam is part of the dream. When we wake up, he disappears. He's not our son. He was our guide.

Steve: Yeah, as a matter of fact... He raised us.

Nibiru: What?

Sam was a figure of the dream. The Keeper of the Rainbow, he who raised Alex and Steve had entered the dream as Sam to guide them. And he would not let them down.

Nibiru: Nonetheless, you've put yourselves in a bad predicament. You just misplaced your last escape.

Guardian Moon: No Nibiru... you have. Because we have one thing you can't counter.

Nibiru: And what would that be?

Guardian Moon: Antimatter.

His eyes expand...

Nibiru: NOOOO!!!

...

Sam: As it was in the beginning-

Nibiru races to the crater.

Sam: -Is now, and ever shall be-

Nibiru jumps in.

Sam: -World without end-

Nibiru tears off the door of the shuttle

Sam: Amen.

Nibiru steps aboard, and Sam activates the shield.

Guardian Sun: Goodbye!

Alex and Steve: Bye!!

Steve: Thanks for everything!

Guardian Moon: No problem! And good luck with your uncle!

Alex: Yeah, we'll need it.

The ground began to shake, sinkholes began to form, lava erupted, the entire planet began to collapse.

Sam: I guess this is it!

Nibiru: Intense breathing

Sam: You know you've just been a program to Alex and Steve, but I know you've done very unrighteous things. You're unholy, Nibiru. You're impure. You're just a floating forsaken rock.

Nibiru: I didn't- I didn't intend for-

...

Sam: Goodbye Nibiru.

Nibiru opens his dying eyes very wide... wide enough for Sam to see an odd-looking figure. It looked like a... a zodiac.

Sam: What is that shape in your eye.

Nibiru: Intense breathing ...It's your final fate. ARGH

The planet's thin atmosphere began to dissolve.

Alex: Maybe the Theory of Everything will come to us now!

Steve: If so, I think we've got a shot!

Alex: You know, I'm not sure if Herobrine will be our final fate. But nonetheless, it's gonna be a big factor.

Steve: I know. We'll see where it takes us.

The planet began to launch solar eruptions.

Sam: What is the meaning of that symbol?!

Nibiru: It's the step after Herobrine.

Sam: Which is what?!

Nibiru: ...Bloodlust.